Let's work together on this

Organisations today are increasingly focused on driving innovation to make themselves more flexible and adaptable. Effective collaboration is key to achieving this, and technology provides an important underpinning to facilitate collaboration in increasingly distributed business environments.

However, what organisations mean by collaboration varies considerably. You need to position your solution effectively in a highly fragmented and hype-driven marketplace. This involves understanding the role of collaboration in an organisation's current and future business strategies and processes, and having a strong partner network to help you deliver on their requirements.

You need real-world research and advice to guide you towards opportunity and show you how businesses are addressing collaboration in practice.

Critical questions you need to ask

How are organisations using or planning to use technology to enable collaboration?

How are organisations integrating collaboration into their key business and IT processes?

Where are our strengths and weaknesses perceived to be, relative to our competition?

Who should we be partnering with to strengthen our collaboration offering?

How can we sell collaboration software into organisations at an enterprise-wide level?
